Parking: A reminder that the 4th and Columbia lot is open for our use. Be careful to park inside the chain link fence. Wine and cheese (& beer & soda) reception: District 20 is honoring its members with a after tonight's session. Congratz to all of you who reached masterpoint milestones in 2013. I know there are many of you, but there has been quite some buzz about three members who went over 10,000 points: Hendrik Sharples, Ed Ulman, and Jeff Taylor. So stop in after the game and celebrate all the new Life Masters and other masters!

The Oregon Trail (Jumping Off, from the DVD "The Oregon Trail")

Many emigrants made the 2,000 mile trek for patriotic reasons, to colonize Oregon for the country they loved. They got land, and the U.S. got Oregon. By 1846 thousands of people had settled there, and the British ceded everything south of the 49th parallel. But the emigration continued. Every year in the early spring, Oregon-bound travelers from the East converged on St. Louis, the last big city most would ever see. They loaded their wagons onto steamships for the journey up the Missouri River. The boats struggled upward against the rapid current, snagging and grounding on sandbars. This was the easiest leg of the journey, but just after 200 miles the Missouri jogs north, and the emigrants were headed west. So, they unloaded at small towns; Independence, Westport, St. Joseph, Omaha, and Council Bluffs were "jumping off" places. Each spring these hamlets became raucous boom towns while emigrant campers prepared for their journey west.

MUSIC TO FLEE FROM

The train station in Portland, Oregon, must be a happening place, because young men have taken to hanging out in it. Many attempts to disperse the crowds there all failed. Now, though, the authorities must have delved into their own past youths for a solution by asking themselves, "What would drive me away?" The answer: opera. Classical music blared over the station's speakers during a pilot program did the trick! There was a drop in 18- to 25-year-olds loitering around the station once the fat lady sang. One young guy hastily stormed out just as Bizet's Carmen proclaimed her love for the one who did not love her.

299ER STRATIFIED PAIRS

Congratulations to five new Life Masters!!!! Ray and Penny Lepp, from Bellevue, WA achieved the rank in Bracket 3 of the Vancouver KOs playing with John Emmerson, Federal WA and Melinda Wesgate, Mercer Island, WA. B.J. Kolkman, from Spokane, WA, earned her points playing with Anne Henrichs, also from Spokane, and Carol Goodrich, Vancouver, WA, and Karen Frogner, Nine Mile Falls, WA in Bracket 2 of the Early Bird Morning KOs. Margaret Evenson, from Portland, OR, went over playing in Bracket 4 of the Vancouver KOs with Dawn Campbell, Betsy McCormick, and Jonathan Bean, all from Portland. And Marodean Herzman, from Gresham, OR, rose in rank playing with Renee Ferrera, Ram Kashyap, and Harriet Anderson, all from Portland, OR in Bracket 3 of the Beaverton KOs. Thanks, ACBL, for having bracketed knockout events! ©

THURSDAY AFTERNOON SIDE GAME

THURSDAY A/B OPEN PAIRS FIRST SESSION

If you push the opponents into a questionable game, when they would have stopped in a partial, you must double. It's going to be a top or a bottom anyway, and it might make declarer nervous enough to botch the play. The same is true for questionable slams.

The word "kibitzer" derives from the German word for a green plover, an inquisitive bird which likes to watch other birds building their nests. Modern dictionaries define the term as someone who likes meddling in the affairs of others. Under bridge laws, a bridge kibitzer may be removed at a player's request without cause.

THURSDAYEVENINGSIDE GAME

Grant Baze's Six Guides (1985)

3) With 6-5, come alive. I once said, "with 6-5, keep bidding until somebody doubles. Either they double you, or your partner doubles them." I meant this as an exaggeration, of course, to stress the point that with huge distributional hands you bid a lot. Balanced hands are defensive in nature. The offensive potential of a 4-3-3-3 hand is basically just a function of its power. This power is just as useful, often more useful, on defense. If the power is split between the partnerships, and all hands are balanced, the first pair to get to the three level loses (Providing the other pair has the common sense to defend). The law of total tricks clearly explains this concept

Distributional hands, however, are offensively orientated. If you are 6-5, add an ace to the high-card-point total of your hand. Add another ace if you have twelve cards in two suits, and add a third ace if you have thirteen cards in two suits. Even then, your hand is stronger than the adjustment indicates.

Also, with distributional hands, there is a much greater chance of a double game swing if you defend. At IMPs or total points, never risk a double game swing. If you go down one when they were going down one, it is no big deal. This does not mean you randomly overrule partner's decision; if he is aware your hand is distributional and doubles the opponents anyway, you need a very good reason to pull his double.

The corollary to this guide is "with 6-4, bid more." Appreciate the power of distribution in competitive and constructive auctions. Temper with common sense and, in competitive auctions, with vulnerability. Do not blame me if you go for 1700 because you kept bidding "until somebody doubled," when you have 6-5 distribution and no high cards, especially now that the powers that be have (inadvisably) changed the scoring rules.
4) Three notrump ends all auctions. 3NT is usually a good choice of contract. It requires only nine tricks, it is not susceptible to a bad trump split, and more than other game contracts, it will make in practice more often than it should make in theory. If the contest is matchpoints, there is another advantage to $3 \mathrm{NT} ; 430$ versus 420 will often be worth half a board to your score. The bid of 3NT is a slam-depressant for suit play. In slam-going auctions, a 3NT bid is trying to slow the auction down. The message it conveys is that the 3NT bidder has slow cards and no redeeming fit.
5) The 5 -level belongs to the opponents. Be very slow to jeopardize the possible plus position you create when you push the opponents to the five level. If the decision is close whether to push on, double them, or pass, then you should pass. If you push on and go for too much, or it is a phantom, or you double them and they make it, you have a terrible result. If you double them and beat them one, you may have gained little or nothing. If you pass, in most cases the worst that will happen to you is that you break even. This is almost analogous to a statement made by Daryl Royal: "If the (foot)ball is in the air, only three things can happen, and two of them are bad."
6) Aces, spaces, and His Majesty's faces. The standard 4-3-2-1 point count is wrong. It underestimates Aces, overemphasizes everything else, and does not factor in spot cards. The ace is by far the most important card in the deck, representing trick-taking power, control power, tempo power, and conjunctive power. Depending upon how many cards you have in the Ace-suit, you can take the Ace whenever you want. An Ace stands alone in its power; it does not need a companion card or care about position. The trick-taking power of a King, however, may be worth nothing. Without a companion card, the trick-taking power of a King may be strictly positional, and depend upon the location of the Ace. Queens and Jacks have no tempo power and at best third- or fourth-round control power. Their primary power is conjunctive and, to a lesser extent, positional.
Voids and singletons are next in importance. I will limit this discussion to singletons; you can extrapolate the information to voids. The opponents cannot lead a Queen through your singleton. If you had the King instead of a singleton, the power of the King would be positional, and there would be no control left once the King was gone. The singleton retains power until that hand runs out of trumps; not only does the singleton retain power, it may be a source of several tricks, which is even beyond the power of an Ace. Furthermore, partner's knowledge of the location of your singleton will help him in determining how the two hands mesh. I think singleton-showing bids are the biggest advance in bidding theory since I have been playing bridge. A singleton opposite my KQ10-how many NT can we play? A singleton opposite my three little -- what suit and how high can we fly?

Next in importance are Kings. They lead a suit, you win the Ace and lose a trick somewhere, and they run their suit or at least cash a trick or two. They cannot do that if you own the King as well. The King is not only a trick, it has real power as a control card.

Aces, singletons, and Kings are suit cards, indicating you should make a serious effort to play the hand in a suit. It is in suit contracts that the standard point count is most ineffective. I strongly suggest you adjust the way you evaluate your high-card points. Add a half point for every Ace. If it is clear the contract is going to be in a suit, add a full point for every Ace, and give negative weight to Queens and Jacks. Give positive weight to good spot cards, particularly for notrump contracts.

Choices of suit or notrump and selection of level are matters of judgment -- evaluation of the trick-taking potential and control power of a hand. In suit contracts and high level notrump contracts, tricks and controls are the true measures of the worth of the combined hands of a partnership.

The only reason to lead a suit bid by the opponents is if you "own" the suit ... or if you have a singleton and a real shot at getting some ruffs.

Welcoming and Training Your New Puppy

Marti Ronemus wrote an amusing column for new players at the Las Vegas NABC (Daily Bulletin, July 23, 2008, p.3).
She spoke of how a pamphlet for puppy training could also apply to the care of bridge partners. See if you don't agree.

- Treat your new puppy with respect and love if you want an enduring relationship.
- Catch your puppy doing something RIGHT.
- Remember, sometimes you need to leave your puppy alone to play.
- Keep training sessions short, otherwise your puppy will lose interest.
- Small morsels of food are useful in modeling good behavior.
- Your puppy cannot learn a new command right away.
- Never use harsh words. Your puppy is trying to do the right thing. If he isn't learning, it's your fault!

Remember, if a dog was the teacher you would learn things like:

1. When loved ones come home, always run to greet them.
2. Never pass up the opportunity to go for a joy ride.
3. Allow the experience of fresh air and the wind in your face to be pure ecstasy.
4. Take naps.
5. Stretch before rising.
6. Run, romp, and play daily.
7. Thrive on attention and let people touch you.
8. Avoid biting when a simple growl will do.
9. On warm days, stop to lie on your back on the grass.
10. On hot days, drink lots of water and lie under a shady tree.
11. When you're happy, dance around and wag your entire body.
12. Delight in the simple joy of a long walk.
13. Be loyal.
14. Never pretend to be something you're not.
15. If what you want lies buried, dig until you find it.
16. When someone is having a bad day, be silent, sit close by, and nuzzle them gently.
